

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An interferometric measurement system capable of measuring tilt of a reflecting surface with respect to a vertical axis. The system preferably includes four laser beams spaced at predetermined distances to measure distances between the measurement system and four locations on the reflecting surface. A controller is also provided for receiving inputs from the measuring laser beams to mathematically determine a tilt of the location being measured.